

This remarkable collection of papers gives a comprehensive overview of translation from multiple perspectives. It offers theoretical and empirical insights into the most important aspects of translatology, from literary to specialised translation. Covering different aspects of translation and including multiple examples from literary and non-literary corpora, this monograph offers useful methodological approaches and guidelines and an extensive list of relevant reference literature for the subject matter.

Prof. Solzica Popovska

This collection of papers offers a wide scope of topics and serve as an excellent starting point for all current and future translators that seek to delve into the realm of translation science and practice from a theoretical, practical and methodological perspective.
